ANTHROPOLOGY

Anthropology is the study of humankind in all its dimensions, including biological, historical, and cultural perspectives. The Anthropology Department offers undergraduates the opportunity to study biological anthropology, archaeology, and cultural anthropology — in the classroom, the lab, and the field — with active researchers and dedicated teachers, providing students with a global and multicultural perspective valued by many employers today.

Degree Outcomes

- Graduate study in anthropology and related fields at schools including The University of North Carolina at Charlotte, University of Arkansas, and University of Hawaii.
- Professional schools such as law school and medical school.
- Employment with government organizations such as Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and corporations such as Amazon.

The Student Experience

Studying anthropology at UNC Greensboro you may:

- Find 50-million-year-old fossil primates in Wyoming; excavate ancient Peruvian sites; study the effects of natural disasters on modern societies; dig up human ancestors and their tools at Olduvai Gorge in Africa; and explore historic archaeology of the Piedmont region.
- Study medical and applied anthropology.
- Gain access to a multitude of internship opportunities.
- Participate in interdepartmental programs in African American and African diaspora studies, archaeology, international studies, and linguistics.
- Join the Lambda Alpha National Honor Society, which provides incentives for exceptional anthropology students in the form of travel grants, scholarships for graduating seniors, and a publication venue for student research.
- Work with faculty to produce original research and present it at regional and national professional conferences.
- Learn more and see the program firsthand by Scheduling a Tour.

Accolades & Accomplishments

- Our small department of about 10 faculty and 125 majors provides many hands-on educational opportunities for students to work closely with faculty and other students in the classroom, the laboratory, and in the field.
- In recent years, our faculty have brought students on research trips to Mexico, Peru, Tanzania, and Wyoming; and we also provide many research opportunities closer to home.
- UNC Greensboro voted one of the 25 best colleges for anthropology in
